Introduction to Financial Aid
What is Financial Aid?

• It is important to provide students with options as they pursue post-secondary education and/or training.

• Financial aid is any federal, state, institutional, nonprofit or private funds that help pay for postsecondary education. Some aid needs to be paid back, some is earned, and some aid is a gift. In order to receive assistance, the FAFSA must be completed.

• FAFSA (Free Application for Student Financial Aid) is the application completed every year by students and parents who are applying for any type of federal and/or state financial aid.
Types of Aid

- Merit-based aid is aid received based on a student’s skill or ability.
- Need-based aid is aid received based on a student’s financial need.
- A student may receive both merit-based and need-based aid.

- Scholarships are money awarded to students based on academic or other achievements that help pay for the cost of school/training. In most cases they do not need to be repaid.

- Grants are financial aid, often based on financial need, that help pay for the cost of school/training. In most cases they do not need to be repaid.

- Direct Unsubsidized Loan is a federal loan made by the U. S. The interest on this loan accrues from the date of disbursement and continues throughout the life of the loan.

- Direct Plus Loan (Parent Plus Loan) is a loan made by the U.S. Department of Education to a graduate or professional student and/or parents of a dependent undergraduate student. The borrower is fully responsible for paying the interest regardless of the loan status. A credit check is associated with this loan and a co-signer may be necessary.

- Private Loan is a nonfederal loan made by a lender such as a bank, credit union, state agency, or a school. A credit check is associated with this loan and a co-signer may be necessary. The interest on this loan is higher than a federal direct loan with a variable rate that changes over time.
