

LDOE Weekly Newsletter

September 24, 2019

Dear Colleagues,

Thanks to your hard work and the hard work of tens of thousands of students and educators, more students graduate from high school today than at any time in our state's history. More earn high-wage industry credentials, statewide dual enrollment credits, and AP or CLEP test credits accepted at colleges across the country. Perhaps most encouraging, more students than ever before earn TOPS, allowing them a funded community college or university education.

However, a difficult question looms over these successes: what happens to the many high school graduates who aren't fully prepared for a traditional college experience—academically, financially, or socially? Is it debt and unpaid tuition bills? Is it low-wage work with limited opportunities for advancement? Is it unemployment? Is it all three?

Last school year, the Department issued a request for proposals to develop pilot Extension Academies, fully funded, grade 13 experiences for TOPS University students not earning TOPS or Jump Start students not earning a high-wage, high-demand industry-based credential after their senior year. Local school systems could submit proposals, partnering high schools with colleges and employers, to provide grade 13 students with a full-year of dual enrollment coursework, workplace-based learning experiences, and coaching that would culminate in advanced statewide industry credentials or significant progress toward an associate degree. The Orleans Parish School Board, in partnership with YouthForce NOLA, submitted a pilot application. BESE and the Board of Regents approved the plan in June.

Schools and school systems across the state can now study the New Orleans pilot, in which roughly 20 students are presently participating. This Thursday, September 26, the Department will issue the RFP again, seeking additional pilot Extension Academy proposals to develop small-scale models for study and potential replication in the future. I hope you will review the RFP and consider the potential impact your school system's involvement could have on young people at a critical point in their lives.

The question we used to ask ourselves was how high we could raise our graduation rate and how low we could push our dropout rate. Now we are compelled to ask what happens to our graduates, and whether they risk dropping out of work and the economy even after they graduate from high school. If this is the case, even with a small number of students, we must rise to meet this new dropout challenge.

As always, thank you for all you do for our children,

John

Reminder: U.S. Presidential Scholars Program

The U.S. Department of Education has invited chief state school officers to nominate outstanding students for the U.S. Presidential Scholars Program. This year, states are allowed to submit nominations for up to twenty-five outstanding students who would otherwise not qualify under the program's traditional academic component (automatically qualified based on ACT/SAT scores) or arts component.

Nominations may also include students who have demonstrated outstanding achievements in career and technical education (CTE).

The Department invites school systems to submit nominations for up to three outstanding students. The nominations must include a male and female student for the general category, and at least one nomination should be for a student who has been successful in CTE. Students must be high school seniors scheduled to graduate or receive a diploma between January and August of 2020. Please review the additional program requirements to learn more.

Nominations should be submitted through a single nomination letter for all nominees (not to exceed three pages total) signed by the local superintendent or school leader, and emailed to leslie.hill@la.gov no later than November 15 at 4:30 p.m. Please include the student's name, home mailing address, gender, and email address, as well as the high school name, mailing address, and CEEB code. - If any school or school system is not listed in the form, please email ldoecommunications@la.gov.
