

Priority:

The school system will have a plan for the continuous use of aligned curricular materials during periods of school facility closure or modified operations, exclusive to adaptations produced by instructional materials providers.

Introduction:

Disrupting the school year has created broad academic challenges for students, particularly those most vulnerable before the crisis occurred. Instructional materials are one of the most important tools educators use in the classroom to enhance student learning. School systems should plan to use high-quality instructional materials in all learning scenarios (virtual, hybrid, and traditional). In order to provide continuous core instruction with high-quality materials, modifications to routines and procedures are necessary for school systems and leaders, teachers, and parents.

Pacing may need to be adjusted to ensure that high-quality instructional materials are taught as intended. Instructional pacing of high quality-materials is adapted using publisher guidance, when available, to ensure students continue on-track to complete all grade-level standards.

- ELA: Units should be taught as intended to the greatest extent possible when adapting to virtual/hybrid learning. Lessons may take multiple days to complete.
- Math: Lessons should be taught as intended to the greatest extent possible when adapting to distance learning. If pacing must be adjusted, publisher guidance will indicate which lessons are most critical.

Educators must ensure that high-quality instructional materials are accessible during virtual/hybrid learning and that accommodations are continuously provided across all learning scenarios. Reopening Guidance for Special Education Leaders provides additional guidance.

The following actions and resources, though not exhaustive, aim to provide examples of best practices for consideration by educators. This document supports the Strong Start Instructional Materials Guidance to help school systems adapt academic plans from 2020-2021 to include distance learning using high-quality instructional materials.
